Does the total award 250,000 need to be divided evenly over the three years? or can we start off in year one with a larger portion and decrease in year 2 and 3? The award does not need to be evenly divided. You'll see that the total award duration is 24 months, but this is spread over 3 years. Year 1 is three months (Oct-Dec), Year 2 is a full calendar year of 12 months, and Year 3 is nine months (Jan-Sept). There is no expectation that the award is divided evenly over these time periods.

Generally, costs are either:

One-Time-Costs: This is common to occur at the start of the award period (purchasing supplies, new software/licenses/systems, conducting staff training), but may also happen intermittently based on events or trainings.

On-going costs: these are generally consistent expenses, like salary or local travel that would occur throughout the entire award

Regardless of the cost type, it does not need to be equally divided.

It states under personnel that it is limited to staff providing direct services. Our collaborative was thinking of hiring a project manager. Would this not qualify? A project manager whose role was to oversee the work you are delivering in this grant would fall under personnel. It would be up to you whether their entire salary is covered in this grant award or if you would want other funding to cover some of it.

There are three orgs in the collaborative. We are thinking of doing 10% for admin cost to the lead org. Can we do this? and if so where should I put this? and do I need to spread it out across the three years? The lead organization could include up to (maximum) 15% for indirect expenses on the budget. Indirect Expenses are a line item at the bottom of the budget and these are essentially “Administrative Expenses” that the organization would incur (utilities, rent, back-end office work, administration time for invoicing/ expense reporting, etc). Each year, you can have up to 15% of your total Direct Costs under the line “Indirect”. You can certainly add a 10% indirect rate instead of 15%, or change the rate each year. The total award of $250k is the same, regardless of what your indirect rate is. This means if you choose a lower indirect rate, you will have higher direct costs.
